Conserving the Lesser Florican

Without a comprehensive and sustained conservation effort the Lesser Florican is doomed to extinction. Its breeding habitat, fodder producing grasslands of western India, are crucial to agrarian livelihoods. Thus, this workshop does not merely address the survival of a critically endangered species but aspires to improve and increase our fodder producing land.

Objectives

a) Formulating a conservation strategy
b) Generating awareness
c) Identifying action groups at the district level who will make an inventory of protected grasslands, identify priority conservation areas and educate people on why grasslands need to be protected.
