Dear Sir/Madam,

We are happy to send you the 2009 Report of the Nongovernmental International Panel on Climate Change (NIPCC), titled Climate Change Reconsidered.

This report was produced by 37 scientists from 14 countries and contains more than 4,000 references to peer reviewed science. It is a comprehensive and authoritative response to the alarmist reports issued by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC).

The NIPCC report highlights the weaknesses of the computer models for climate change used by the IPCC. It explains how the models suffer from numerous deficiencies and shortcomings that could alter even the very sign (plus or minus) warming or cooling) of earth's projected temperature response to rising atmospheric CO2 concentrations.

The consensus of the scientific papers in this report show there is no relation between global warming and damage to biodiversity, human health or occurrences of natural disasters. Further, this report finds that anthropogenic carbon emission probably has only a miniscule influence on global warming – thus the industries of developing nations like India should not be disproportionately burdened to cut carbon emissions.

The scientists who wrote this study are working on a second edition, to be published in 2013. You can track their progress by visiting their web site at www.nipccreport.org. Additional information about global warming can also be found on two web sites maintained by the report's publisher, The Heartland Institute, at www.EnvironmentandClimate-News.org and www.GlobalWarmingHeartland.org.

Liberty Institute, based in New Delhi, is an independent think tank dedicated to empowering the people by harnessing the power of the market. Liberty, in partnership with Heartland, has now reprinted the NIPCC report, for wider dissemination in India. For more information about us, please visit our web site at www.LibertyInstitute.org.in.

We hope that you will find the contents of this report useful. We welcome your comments and suggestions. Thank you very much for your attention.

Sincerely,

Barun S. Mitra
