My dear Prof. Krishnan,

I cannot express to you in adequate terms my sense of deep gratitude to you for your kind favour dated 21st, giving cover to the review of Wooster's book. While I was shrieking almost to the point of being uncivil to you, what a magnanimous attitude you have uniformly been adopting towards an erring friend. The only way in which I can expiate my sin is to visit Benares and pray to the presiding Deity and the River Goddess. Will you not play the part of the one or the other and excuse all the trouble and annoyance I have caused you? How terribly small I look! Shall I send you any more books?

I hope you are in the enjoyment of excellent health and spirits.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,

C. R. Narayan Rao
