

studies are carried out with fish as a model to detect the mutagenic effects of certain chemicals, with a view to develop this same into a standardized testing protocol.

Further research interests include development of fish as a useful biological system for the monitoring of environmental carcinogens and mutagens as well. Studies on the genetic aberrations at the molecular level induced by heavy metals. Mutagenicity testing using different systems.

Hyderabad application sent

On 10-12-80

