Dear Smt. Braham Prakash,

Ten years ago I met at USSR a fair, honest, kind man. I learnt soon thereafter that he was a colossus in the world of science & technology.

There were several occasions when a raging controversy would be resolved by looking at the problem the way "BP" would look at it. "BP's" judgement of issues and people was respected by even those who considered themselves adversely affected by that judgement.

I will miss him, as will a whole generation of scientists in our country who look with alarm at a depleting resource - people with integrity and compassion, merit and fine judgement.

Yours sincerely,

V. Siddhastha

Dear Dr Siddhartha

Your message of sharing our grief at the passing away of my father has given us the strength to bear this loss with fortitude. He has left us the legacy of living up to the great principles of objectivity, fairness and gentleness in the performance of duties and in all other spheres of living. We shall strive to be guided by those qualities that endeared him to all his colleagues and associates.

With grateful thanks for your support,

Yours sincerely,

Arun Prakash

Dear Dr. Siddhartha

Your letter touched all of us - family and friends - like no other letter did. Probably you paid the price for understanding BP-the man that he was. Only a noble soul could see what you saw in him.

I have not met you but I feel should such an opportunity come I will consider it a fortune to know a person of your dimensions.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

R. Prakash
