

To

LESLIE C. COLEMAN, Esq., M.A., Ph.D.,

Director of Agriculture in Mysore,

BANGALORE.

Sir,

WE, your Students humbly beg leave to tender you our respects and express our heartfelt thanks for the kindness you have shown us these two years of our life in the Agricultural School. We are highly grateful to you for the keen interest you took in our progress. The excellent advice you have always been good enough to give us - shall be most faithfully followed by us. Your advice, in special, of yesterday shall be our lode-star in our future years. Your personal kindnesses to us and your parental treatment of us shall be lifelong treasured in our hearts, and we need hardly say, that with your noble qualities of head and heart, you are a model for us whose footsteps if one follows, one is sure to attain success and happiness.

Now that the parting day is come, it is with the deepest sorrow that we are bidding you good-bye. We rely on your blessings in our behalf and on your continued interest in our welfare though - - circumstances may keep us far from you. We ardently hope that when we have started our Farms you and our other respected professors - honour us with occasional visits and give us the benefits of your - valuable advice and assistance.

We fervently pray God to bestow upon you and yours long life, health, and happiness.

We remain, Sir,

Your Obedient Students.

BANGALORE,

17th April 1915.
