Prof. Amulya K. N. Reddy received his Ph. D. in Applied Physical Chemistry from the Imperial College, London, in 1958. He was a Professor at the Indian Institute of Science (IISc), Bangalore, India, during 1970-91 and was a visiting Senior Research Scientist at the Center for Energy and Environmental Studies at the Princeton University in 1984. Prof. Reddy has been a member of various committees/organisations which include: the Scientific and Technical Advisory Panel of the Global Environment Facility; the Energy Research Group of the International Development Research Centre, Canada; the Economic and Planning Council, Government of Karnataka; and the Panel of Eminent Persons on Power for the Minister of Power, Government of India. He is the author of more than 250 papers, and co-author and editor of several books on energy, rural technology, and science and technology policy. Prof. Reddy was the founder of Centre for Application of Science and Technology to Rural Areas (presently Centre for Sustainable Technologies) at the IISc, Karnataka State Council for Science and Technology and International Energy Initiative.

Prof. Reddy was awarded the Volvo Environment Prize for 2000 for his outstanding achievement in collaboratively working out a new policy-driven approach to the technical analysis of world energy needs.

The IISc Centenary Conference

The Indian Institute of Science came into existence in the year 1909, giving shape to the extraordinary vision of Jamsetji Nusserwanji Tata. The initial endowment provided by Jamsetji Tata, the munificent grant of a vast stretch of land by the Maharaja of Mysore, and the unflinching support of the Government of India were instrumental in setting up the Institute.

The establishment of the Institute was an important landmark in expanding traditions of scientific research in India in the twentieth century. The Institute is an enduring symbol of the very best in Indian scientific research and has assiduously maintained the highest standards of academic excellence, matching the best in the world.
